[Trina]: Say hi, Daddy. Say hi, Daddy. (playing with the baby, speaking for him) “Hi Daddy”

[Darren]: Whose –damn white baby is that?

[Trina]: This is your baby, OK? He's just light-skinned. Mm-hmm.

[Darren]: That one might be mine. That one right there. I'm not totally sure. Just because you name him Darren don't mean he belong to Darren. But I don't care what this baby's name is. This baby is rice-skinked, but not light-skinked. That is a white child. That is Caucasian from the mountains of Caucasus. That is a Slavic baby, a Viking from Iceland. That's a good...That baby got 730 as a credit rating right now as an infant.

[Trina]: You the only one I've been with, Darren! Just let me explain to you.

[Darren]: I'll show you the math. I've been in here 16 consecutive years. You know how long consecutive is, don't you? Okay, so it means one right after the motherlovin other. I ain't never missed a day. So, clearly, you've been having some conjugal visits with some other fellas other than me. That's not my baby. That's almost a grown white man you brought in here. His glasses are certainly grown. I've never seen a baby with that type of prescription. And why does that baby look like Officer Joshua? Chick, you been with the guard?

[Trina]: Uh, nuh-uh.

[Jr.]: Hey, Darren, stop talking to my mom like that, man. Be respectful.

[Derren]: You're absolutely right. I apologize for that. It's just that this chick [pauses, collects self]

[Jr.]: (disappointedly) There you go again.

[Darren]: ...your mother was misbehaving. I'm sorry. I should have set a better example in front of the nice white gentleman and your mother. All right, so could I please speak to my black son privately, please, if that be okay with you, Trina? Mm-hmm. I mean it in no disrespect, sir. Hope to work for you one day when I get out.

[Trina]: Come on, baby. Oh, raggedy head, sir.

[Darren]: Excuse me, son. This is my first white baby.
